

Special Agent

Healthcare Services/Medical Background

Location- Negotiable After Selection, United States

Summary

Doctors, physician assistants, nurses and other health professionals work at the FBI in a number of capacities. Today, more than 250 Special Agent Medics - EMTs, advanced paramedics, emergency physicians and others - support our mission. As an FBI Special Agent Medic, you will support crisis-response efforts, special operations, anti-terrorism and high-risk investigations, as well as use your medical expertise to conduct interviews and recover evidence.

Responsibilities

- Support crisis-response efforts, special operations, terrorism and high-risk investigations.
- You will tend to not only FBI employees but others, such as subjects and civilians involved in a hostage situation where it's not safe for local emergency workers to enter the scene.
- Use your health and medical expertise in other ways as a Special Agent, such as conducting interviews requiring health expertise and recovering evidence. Your ultimate mission: to protect the American people and uphold the Constitution of the United States.

Qualifications

- BA/BS or advanced degree (preferably in a medical, health or public safety discipline).
- Certification as an EMT or Paramedic.
- Ability to quickly grasp details of cases requiring health and medical expertise and clearly communicate the impact to non-expert colleagues and teams both internally and externally.
- Demonstrated health expertise and ability to respond calmly and effectively in crisis situations.
- Exceptional problem-solving and analytical skills.
- Be detail-oriented, yet keep a strategic focus.

- Ability to objectively evaluate information and make sound judgements.
- Honesty and integrity must be the foundation of who you are.
- The drive and commitment to make a difference in the communities you serve.
